Degree programme

The tourism sector offers a broad and exciting range of careers; this cooperative study programme is designed in a correspondingly diverse and cosmopolitan way. Students on the Business Administration/International Tourism course receive training in alternating theoretical and practical phases, which qualify them as professionals in selected areas of the tourism sector. Students will acquire business knowledge, focus on tourism related topics, apply specialist knowledge to concrete tourism projects and use practical phases in the sector as a springboard for working in the world of tourism.

There is a strong focus on the cooperative nature of the programme with its international direction. This is accompanied by intense foreign language acquisition with the accent on business- and tourism-related issues. Practical examples and projects, visits to selected tourism companies and the acquisition of key skills round off the content of this course.

Tuition is almost exclusively in English, with a strong international focus, additional language offers and the possibility of a semester abroad supporting the international aspects of the course and rounding off the spectrum of qualifications. The modules in business administration economics and international business administration are taught under the International Programme and offer the opportunity to meet students from other international programmes as well as guest students from all over the world.

Professional field

The cooperative programme of tourism studies prepares students for leadership roles in all areas of tourism, including: the international hotel industry, travel agencies and tour operators, marketing companies, wellness spas, passenger airlines, cruise travel and event management.

Degree structure

The Bachelor's degree in International Tourism is linked to the International Programme and combines the classic modules of a business management degree with international, sector-specific and cross-cultural content. The first part of the course teaches the fundamentals of business and tourism as they relate to international operations. Modules with a particular focus on tourism include:

- Basics of tourism
- Sustainable tourism
- Accessible tourism
- Health tourism
- Law relating to tourism

More advanced study prepares students for areas of application in the international arena and offers options in related areas, for instance:

- International hotel management
- Key players in international tourism
- International destination management.

In the international study programme, the fifth and sixth semesters are spent doing in-depth work with the partner company.

The fifth theory semester and practical phases may be spent abroad.

Application procedure and deadlines

Applications by prospective Cooperative Studies students are not submitted to the HWR Berlin, but are instead sent directly to the Cooperative Partners using the Partner database on our website as the basis. These partners select prospective cooperative students from the applicants and draw up study contracts with them.

Make sure you submit your application in a timely manner; the selection procedure for cooperative students is undertaken by many companies more than a year prior to the commencement of studies.

Prospective Cooperative Studies students may also propose a new company that is prepared to allow the applicant to undertake Cooperative Studies. In this case, the company contacts the Division Director of the relevant study programme directly. Through discussion it is clarified whether the company is suitable candidate for a cooperation agreement. If this is successful, it is then determined whether there are free places for the interested company.

The cooperation partners for this degree programme are illustrated at the bottom of this page.
