

Liability Note and Use of Licensed Content

The library provides its users with access to e-books, e-journals, databases, and other licenced electronic resources, the use of which is subject to applicable law, licence terms, and conditions of use.

Use of licenced resources is restricted to authorized users. Unless otherwise specified in the licence terms, licenced resources are intended for private, academic, or other permissible non-commercial purposes only.

Sharing licenced content, in whole or in part, with unauthorized third parties is prohibited. This applies regardless of whether the content is shared digitally (e.g. via email, download link, cloud services, storage medium, or remote data transmission) or analogously (e.g. as a printout or a copy).

Unless permitted by law and the licence terms, the following activities are prohibited: systematically or automatically reproducing content, mass downloading, disseminating and distributing, making works available to the public, posting the content to a publicly accessible website or network as well as using licenced resources for commercial purposes.

Translating, modifying, altering or otherwise adapting licenced works or parts of them and subsequently publishing or exploiting them is prohibited unless it is in compliance with the law or licence terms or permitted by the rights holders.

The use of robots, spiders, crawlers, scraping tools, automated downloading programs, or other comparable technical measures to systematically search, index, analyse, reproduce, or automatically accessing licenced content is generally prohibited unless it is permitted by law and/or the respective licence agreements and terms of use. This specifically also applies to text and data mining, AI training, automated content analysis, and comparable data-based analyses.

Sharing login data with third parties is not permitted. Technical protection measures, access restrictions, or other fallback systems may not be circumvented, removed, or interfered with. Copyright notices, reference lists, licence terms, and other rights notices may not be removed or changed.

Users are personally responsible for using licenced resources in conformity with the law and/or the respective licence terms. In case of any questions regarding the permissible scope of use, please consult the library or the rights holder.

To the extent permitted by law, the library assumes no liability for any unlawful, improper, or contract-violating use of licenced content by its users. In the event of violations of the law, the licence agreements, or the terms of use, the library may temporarily or permanently deny partial or full access to its electronic resources and consider taking further legal action.